Former Nestlé Chairman Peter Brabeck-Letmathe relinquishes Chairman Emeritus title

Peter Brabeck-Letmathe, former Nestlé Chairman, has informed the company's Board of Directors that he has decided to relinquish his title of Chairman Emeritus, as Nestlé begins a new chapter with new leadership.

Honoring Peter Brabeck-Letmathe's distinguished career, Nestlé's Chair of the Board, Pablo Isla, said: "Peter is one of those individuals whose vision and commitment have left an unforgettable mark on our company. As Chairman Emeritus he continued to follow the company's evolution with genuine interest, and I am certain Peter will remain a valued friend of Nestlé."

Peter Brabeck-Letmathe began his journey with the Nestlé Group in 1968, serving in numerous key leadership positions, including Chief Executive Officer and Chairman of the Board. After leaving his official role in 2017, he continued his association with the company as Chairman Emeritus. With the 159th Annual General Meeting on April 16, 2026, this honorary title will conclude.
